

BOLSHEVIST POSTERS ARE FLASHED BEFORE WEALTHY GERMANS

Communists and Conservatives Clash in Saxony

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
HALLE, GERMANY, Nov. 12.—(By Mail) The old rich property German aristocrat has paid his own through war and revolution here as perhaps in no other part of the new Germany. Great estates and numerous mansions, huge factories and famous salt mines, keep the pre-war customs and conditions virtually unchanged.

Only the painting posters of Bolsheviks and the placards calling "young communists" in meetings indicate that the spirit of unrest is working for the overthrow of the old order. The very fact that conditions here are much the same as they were before the war apparently contributed to the intensity with which the radicals have begun their campaign for "a dictatorship of the proletariat."

The shops are filled with sold foods and fine clothes, but the prices are very high, and wages still are low. The shopkeepers say their trade is almost entirely with the rich, old families, and the farmers who have won prosperity through the changes following the war—the high price of farm products and the depreciation of the mark, which has permitted many to pay mortgages considered an everlasting obligation. Day laborers, gardeners and tenants have no money for luxuries and barely enough to buy necessities.

German Communists refer to Halle as "The Red Heart of Germany," and say the issue between the bourgeoisie and the proletariat is more clearly drawn than even in the more conservative sections of Prussia. The local communist organization is proudly committed to "anti-fascism" and is energetically and openly seeking recruits against the day the revolution shall break.

There have been clashes between radicals and conservatives already, and the River Saale, a narrow stream which flows placidly between high rock cliffs on top of which stand crumbling ruins of 13th century castles, has known victims of knife and gun. One of these was a high army officer.

He was beaten and cut and thrown into the river. As he really essayed to swim to shore he was shot to death. Fist fights and clubbings have by no means been uncommon.

Among the undiscussed are many former soldiers, some of whom hold commissions, and these are supported by their women. Against the communists the men and women of wealth stand solidly together, and generally have the support of the more well-to-do persons. It is noticeable that many of the more active "reds" are young students still pursuing their studies in the old and famous university here. Between the two factions there is, and can be, no spirit of compromise.

In the nation-wide campaign which the German communists decide to begin following the convention of the Independent Socialist party convention here, the Halle wing of the Moscow adherents is being counted upon to bear the brunt of battle in Saxony, for it is considered a strategical center of the campaign will be in this locality.

Five Negroes Guilty Of Killing Merchant

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Raleigh, N.C., Dec. 4.—With great militancy on duty due to the grim and attenuated lynching, the trial of five negroes for the murder of Herman Jones, a prominent merchant, ended last night when the jury returned the verdict of first degree murder in the case of Harry Calvert and Jesse Foster and of second degree in the case of George Poerell, James Hill and Henry Williams.

Judge Devin sentenced the two negroes convicted of first degree murder to life in the electric chair and the three others to 2 years each. The five negroes were taken to the state prison at Raleigh under guard of militiamen.
